TIME IS STILL EVERYTHING

It is difficult this October to grow accustomed to the date. Twelve months cannot have passed since Americans waited for word that the last German air raid had been the signal for the beginning of invasion; since the battle of Britain hung precariously in the balance of events; since Greece inspired all men of dignity with its courageous handling of the would-be invaders from Italy.

No, it cannot have been 18 months, because 12 months make a year, and a year is a long time. Much can happen in a year. Brave Greece can be ground into the dust of Germany's mechanized army. Russia can change from an ally to a foe. A year is time enough for sovereignties, large and small, to disappear. As time is figured, a year is something to be dealt with considerably.

Still a year has not been long enough for the United States to do the job it finally had begun to try to do in earnest 12 months ago in October of 1940. Equipment has begun to clatter out of some of the new factories, a civilian army knows vastly more about fighting than it did 12 months ago when it knew nothing—but a year is not very long as a time for a great nation to get ready to protect itself from military threats to its security.

This always has been a nation where anything was possible. It still is, granted time. But one year after the battle of Britain threatened to end in a way that would leave the United States no further time, it is clear that this country has no secret formula for side stepping the inexorable axiom that even the possible things take time—the impossible ones a little longer. This country still is not ready. Perhaps by the time 12 more months have passed, but not yet.

EVEN GERMANY WAS SURPRISED

At least one point in Adolf Hitler's latest war explanation for the benefit of the public that he hopes will stick with him can't be debated. When he emphasized that the only mistake in the Russian campaign was to underestimate Soviet preparations for war, a lot of foreign generals and diplomats must have murmured, "Brother, we did too."

It scarcely seems reasonable to suppose that Germany's sources of information about Russia were inferior to those of Great Britain and France; it is more likely they were at least as reliable and perhaps superior. That makes it a matter of speculation what might have happened in the war if the belligerent powers had known on Sept. 1, 1939, what they know now.

Germany might have been reluctant to come into contact with the Soviet on a new boundary line in Poland. France, which has lost its alliance with Russia, might have lost even its misplaced confidence in the Maginot line. Great Britain's antipathy for Communism ideology might have been exploited even more brazenly by the evangelists of Hitler's "anti-Red" movement had the British known that Russia was on the way to becoming Europe's major land force.

It always has been necessary to make one of two assumptions about the difficulty encountered by the German army in its invasion of Russia. Either the Russians were better than advertised, or the Germans weren't quite so good. Hitler couldn't be expected to admit the latter in any event, but the bulk of the evidence indicates that he wasn't kidding when he told his German listeners the other day that Soviet Russia was infinitely more powerful as a belligerent than any of its belittlers realized.

AUTOGRAPHING A BAT

Brooklyn's attempt to live up to its press notices as the craziest place in the United States where baseball is concerned promises to be successful. The big borough where the common people of New York City hang out probably will come through with its reputation intact whether the Dodgers win or lose.

A fellow gets to wondering sometimes whether baseball players, themselves, share this peculiar enthusiasm stimulated by the pursuit of their trade. It is a well known fact, for instance, that most ball players high-tail for home the instant the last ball has been thrown—and home usually is some obscure place a long way from there. To be slightly brutal about it, there are few Dodgers who will be found in Brooklyn on their days off, though to the Brooklyn writers tell about it the Dodgers and the Brooklynites are as close together as two sides of a slice of restaurant ham.

The same thing is true of other ball teams. Baseball, it might almost be said, is a game played by small town boys for the amusement of big town boys who want to be small town boys but don't quite know how.

MR. WILLKIE'S UNREQUITED LONGING

Mr. Willkie lately has become a ticklish subject to discuss, because he is controversial like Bertrand Russell and Charles Lindbergh. People get excited about him beyond reason. However, this may not be Mr. Willkie's fault. He might be the victim of an unrequited longing that sets him apart from other men in the political field. He is looking for perfection and not finding it.

Unless the signs are misleading—including Mr. Willkie's latest magazine article criticizing both political parties because they are behaving like political parties in a national emergency—Mr. Willkie still is a businessman wandering among the officeholders and seekers. He continues to be surprised because politicians behave like politicians instead of like poets, scholars, idealists or recent converts: i. e., Mr. Willkie.

This defies the comprehension of ordinary onlookers. They can't understand why a politician should talk about peace and harmony and one big happy family unless he has some axe to grind, but they forget that Mr. Willkie is not a politician, but only a man who ran for the presidency once. That could explain almost everything about him that puzzles anybody if they'd let it.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, October 7.

GENERALLY the astral influences for this day might be read as wielding an adverse influence, but for the fact that such challenging conditions are to be met with a mentality sound in judgment able to encounter duties, obligations and difficulties with balance and stability. The need to concentrate forces and to work toward breaking down obstacles may be ready for opposition, craft and intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is may be able to cope with certain adverse or treacherous situations, during the year, by adhering to set and well-organized plans and objectives, using shrewd as well as clever tactics to meet intrigue, subtlety, tricks and betrayals in all relations and delaying private as well as business and public or group action. The mind should be found equipped to meet all difficulties with shrewdness.

A child born on this day while susceptible to imposition, fraud and duplicity, should be shrewd and clever enough to meet them.

HITLER'S CLAIMS

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

There is food for reflection in the fact that Herr Hitler has even the most cynical observers guessing as to the significance of his tall claim last week that he already had Russia broken and that fresh operations of gigantic dimensions (presumably the pay-off) were in progress.

Apparently a suspicious world hasn't been sure whether the Nazi chief is just trying out a piece of psychological propaganda or whether he really believes he has the Reds beaten.

Having studied his works for a long time, and having seen him in action at close range on many occasions, it strikes me that it is unwise to pooh-pooh his statements without examination, even though they appear flamboyant to his critics. We would seem to have support for this view in the report from London today that the Germans have indeed launched a big scale offensive along the Russian front.

So Hitler was right, though a bit ahead of events, when he said big operations were commencing. He wasn't right when he said the Muscovites were crushed, because they continue to put up the epic resistance which they admit has cost them 1,128,000 men in killed, wounded and missing since the start of this bloody conflict.

What has the Nazi leader in mind when he proclaims the Russian collapse? Hitler is a colossal gambler and it's quite likely he is gambling now that this new offensive of his may deliver the knockout blow to an admittedly hard-pressed foe. He figures the Reds have been weakened enough so they may crack.

ANSWERS QUESTIONS ON VITAMIN B

And Are You Still on That Diet You Started?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am in receipt of a very sensible letter from one of my readers who has asked some very pertinent questions about Vitamin B.

"Please interpret the phrase 'Vitamin-B Complex,' and also explain how 1200 units of it might be taken daily. In a clipping before me, such a dosage is highly recommended for 'Nervous indigestion and Spastic Colon.'"

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

recommended for "Nervous indigestion and Spastic Colon." If agreeable to you, will you please comment on this recommendation?

"A well-known commercial yeast (household) claims to have in each cake: Vitamin A—3,100 units, Vitamin B—150, Vitamin D—400, Vitamin G—40-50 or a total of 3690-3700 units.

"But to provide the 1200 units of Vitamin B, recommended, one must take eight cakes, obviously undesirable."

The Doctor's Answer

In answering these questions first let me say that "Vitamin B Complex" is nothing more than plain old Vitamin B. When the bio-chemists and nutritionists began to study Vitamin B, they found it was made up of several elements, which do slightly different things in the body. One is thiamine chloride, one riboflavin, and then Vitamin B3, B4, B5, B6, etc. Thiamine chloride is measured in international units. The Unit is the anti-neuritic activity of 3 milligrams. It is agreed that the daily requirement for adults is 200 units.

Now as to whether extra amounts of Vitamin B do any good in any conditions, such as "nervous indigestion and colitis," that is where debate starts. Let me go on record as saying that I never said they did. Lack of Vitamin B is supposed along with other actions, to result in "digestive disturbances." Whether adding extra amounts to the daily intake helps digestive disturbances, depends on trial and error. Large amounts of Vitamin B can not, as my reader so sensibly points out, be obtained in an ordinary diet conveniently. The only way to get over 1000 units is to use a commercial (pill) concentrate.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. SYNOPSIS

On his way to Haverstraw to see his father, Jane Rider, David Farnham prevents a young woman from jumping off a ferry. She entrusts him with an envelope, revealing that he deliver it to the socially prominent Richard Garrison, if she doesn't call for it in a week. The girl's eyes glaze with tears as she sees a certain couple walking toward them.

"I know he wouldn't play fair!" she exclaims, and rushes off dropping a compact and a C. B. and pamphlet labeled "Americans. Warning!"

On the train David discovers the envelope is from Al Haverstraw, a man who is the mysterious woman's father. He follows her taxi to a station where he meets Mat Breanu, a young man who is the girl's father. David drops the envelope. Breanu recognizes it as his. When David refuses to reveal who he is, Mat tells him to go to the home of Garrison a ring, Monday.

What did Breanu know about the whole affair? Shortly after a railway station store, David and Jane encounter the couple who had frightened the girl on the boat. A fight ensues, but the couple escape.

Returning home, David and Jane are met by Mrs. Rider and Kurt Helm, a writer, who lives in a nearby cabin. Kurt is infatuated with Jane and has threatened to win her from David. As the party goes to take his baggage from the rumble seat, he pulls back in horror. Stuffed into it is the body of the girl David met on the ferry. Fan Breanu and another man arrive on the scene. Breanu claiming they heard the news over the radio. Mat views the body and exclaims, "Carlie, my sister! Just then the state troopers came. Kurt has disappeared. Later he warns Jane again. David talking too much about Carlie's murder, the propaganda pamphlet. While they are questioning Mat and David, the latter cries "The couple!" and dashes off into the bushes.

CHAPTER NINE

It was ten o'clock Sunday morning. The telephone buzzed close to Mat Breanu's dark head. He looked under rumpled covers, dimly conscious that he was in his own apartment after a hazy experience. Then he remembered. It was Carlie of whom he had dreamed; the beautiful Carlie, brutally murdered and thrust in the rumble seat of Jane Rider's coupe. It all came back: the flash of cameras on the country road below the old farmhouse; the troopers; David Farnham's eager voice telling him he thought he knew.

No, it couldn't be true. Not Carlie. Not now when, if he made any slip, everything he had worked for would be lost; issues more vital than women he had loved. And he loved Carlie.

The telephone went on ringing. He wouldn't answer it.

Why had he looked at Carlie's dead face last night? Her big gray eyes seemed frozen with terror. The bluish wash of a knife had gleamed across the bloodstained collar of his blouse. But no knife had been found. She had been killed between seven-thirty and eight-thirty, they said. Breanu groaned. Better answer that devilish phone.

Slowly, the "Broadway red shot" dragged the lacquered red instrument across the burgundy silk spread, resting it on his hunched knees. "Breanu speaking," he muttered. "Oh—that you, Derek?"

Dick Garrison wasn't his usual pleasant self. "Why the devil did you run away last night?" The lawyer sounded like a man despising his job, who had been up shaved, showered and dressed for hours.

"Fan was ill. So I drove her to town. What is wrong with that?"

Garrison said sharply. "Everybody's wrong! They're holding the Farland boy as a material witness, under guard in the Rider's house. Thanks to Mrs. Rider, the Sergeant let him stay there. He's Jane's fiancé after all. But what those poor women have gone through—"

"She is sweet, the little Jane," Breanu murmured.

Garrison grew audibly exasperated. "She's a mighty plucky girl, standing by her redhead. As for you, Mat—I had to give plenty of bail."

Breanu shifted the telephone to his other knee. "That young Farland is a fool!" he snarled. "I was he who ran away, as you call it. He had Carlie's compact. And why did he rush into those bushes, looking for that couple he talked about?"

"According to his story, a man and woman," Garrison said softly. "We didn't catch them, but he swore they were the couple he saw on the ferry; the couple Carlie was afraid of; the couple who attacked him in Macklin's store. You wouldn't know anything about them—would you, Mat?"

Breanu smoother back his damp black hair. "I know nothing," he denied violently. "You are my lawyer, Derek. I pay you well. Get me out of this. Let me bury my Carlie with no more talk."

Garrison's laugh came dryly over the wire. "I don't need your money, sweetheart. Now listen—" His voice cracked like a whip. "Get wise to yourself. You know more about this than you're telling. Carlie wasn't murdered because of money or jewels. She left them when she left you. This case has—"

"Angles?" Breanu's voice was thick. "You may be right, Derek. I have my ideas. I shall kill the guy who killed Carlie."

"So you have ideas!" Garrison commented quickly. "Are you thinking of a man or woman? You mean the couple?"

"Never mind that," Breanu said far back in his throat.

"Better come clean, Mat, with any information you have," Garrison sounded grim. "I have a feeling you'll be next. And I wouldn't give a nickel for Jane Rider and her bright boy's life until this case is solved. You've all done too much palaver for your own good," he added, as if he had reached the end of his patience. "I'm coming right over," and hung up.

Breanu set the telephone on the table, and slid his short powerful body along the cool sheets. He was sick. He stared at the life-sized portrait of Carlie on the buff wall opposite his bed. A Frenchman who once loved her had painted it as a wedding gift, three years ago. She stood draped in sheer gray tulle; her thick honey-colored hair capping her white skin, her lips enchanting in a crescent smile.

Carlie Swift she was, before she cloped with him; a socialite, as the papers described her. He never had seen her sort. He knew that. He had money all right, but at what risk he must earn it! Not even the streamlined gangsters he hobnobbed with guessed the constant danger of his work. And there had been Carlie always to protect from spies here among his own countrymen—people who hated him.

Carlie loved parties at the exclusive night clubs. They played along the fringe of cliques Carlie would have belonged to were it not for him, but he didn't seem to care. She danced, drank only champagne, and held her head high, always surrounded by men, Breanu tightly, jealously watching at her side.

He touched the bell to summon Doremus, the colored man who had served him two years before he married Carlie. Doremus was his only faithful friend. Breanu thought with bitterness. Who could he trust? No one—not even Dick Garrison, whom once he had looked up to as a clubman, a sport, an ace attorney with connections. He had met Dick through Carlie, of course.

Doremus must be out in the hall, gossiping as usual with the elevator boy. Even with a war in Europe crowding out home news, everyone by now had heard of Carlie's murder. The papers—He must look at them soon.

Her family had never forgiven her. She pretended that didn't hurt. It did, though. Breanu clenched his fists. There had been another man, tall, blond, who whispered in Carlie's ear as they waited or thumbed in the night clubs. From the first Breanu had wondered what the fellow racket was. No one seemed to know, except possibly a reporter called Pete Jefferson, who, one night at a bar, dropped a word in answer to Breanu's too casual question.

Pete, idling over a daiquiri, had said laconically, "Ever hear of patrioters—those birds who sell—or sell out—the country? He's one of them. We can't pin anything on him. He's slick as an eel."

That was what the row was about when Breanu got Carlie home that night. He didn't want this bird nosing into his affairs. He didn't want Carlie to have anything to do with him again.

"I'll see whom I please," Carlie had defied him.

Well, he guessed he was "average," he said a lot of things. Fan was there. Then Carlie slapped him. He told her to go. And she had come.

The worst of it was that Breanu only vaguely remembered what the so-called "patrioter" looked like.

GLOVES FOR CO-EDS ARE ORIGINAL, SMART, SENSIBLE

Every fall season the debonair and casual college crowd introduces innovations in the styling of accessories that their more staid feminine relatives at first regard with suspicion, but finally accept as smart and practical. This year the bright young things have turned their talents to restyling gloves, and have turned out models that are original, smart and sensible. Top left are amusing mittens and beanie called "Mop-em," the inspiration being the lowly floor mop. Their fringed backs and knitted palms come in a number of bright color combinations, and make charming sets. Below, we have doeskin gloves made with the single seam down one side to permit plenty of freedom without danger of splitting seams, and trimmed with fringe. Right, are Eskimo mittens, the deeply furled backs of electrified lamb, thumbs and palms in soft colored suede. They, too, come in a number of colors.

Miami and neighboring cities on the Florida east coast, similarly, closed up windows, evacuated residents of the southern keys, and provided space in public buildings for those whose homes seemed insecure.

Miami Beach revealed almost deserted residential and business areas.

Miami, however, was crowded. Downtown hotels turned away hundreds. Numerous families moved into offices. Babies slept on improvised beds atop slick business desks.

The state remembered its last hurricane, which swept across the keys between the mainland and Key West on Labor day, 1935, killing 500 stranded on the exposed islands. Engineering Refinements Apparent In New Ford V 8's, On Display Here

NEW '42 CARS ARE LOWER AND SAFER

Larger and More Expansive They Offer Complete New Front Design

Powered with either an advanced six-cylinder engine or the standard V-8 Ford motor cars in the 1942 series are on display today at the E. L. Grate Motor Co. show-rooms.

Ford engineers boast that the new cars, featuring new exterior lines and new interior styling, are lower, safer and easier-riding than any of their 29,000,000 predecessors.

Either of the optional Ford engines delivers 90 horsepower in a performance whose operating economy has been improved through a new series of engineering refinements.

Production of the 1942 cars will be sharply curtailed because of national defense requirements, and some materials in normal construction have been replaced, but the engineers say these changes have meant added manufacturing cost rather than any let-down in service or appearance.

Three Ford lines are offered—the Super DeLuxe, DeLuxe and economy Special. The first two are equipped at the factory with either the six or eight-cylinder motor. The Special is offered with only the six-cylinder engine.

Larger and more massive, the new cars have a completely new front design, with a low, wide grille of bright metal as its dominant feature. Headlamps and auxiliary lamps are recessed, and fenders flow into the body.

Paris Maintains Uniform Schedule

As a general rule, the public is inclined to view with suspicion any certain type of service which may be obtained over a varying price range.

For that reason the Paris Cleaners established a policy a long time ago which set up one price for one job and guaranteed top quality for that job. Paris prices do not fluctuate. There are no "bargains" as a means of stimulating volume of business.

The Paris policy, once set up, and Paris quality have remained constant ever since.

A man's suit is cleaned, the price has been set. There is no variation in that schedule. And the quality of cleaning is the same—the best possible, because the Paris has nothing but the best and most modern equipment, the latest information on cleaning practices and the service, always, of high trained workmen.

For this reason, Paris service is called upon frequently in emergency cases, a suit must be cleaned or a frock for some particular occasion. There is no time to do anything else. The customer knows instinctively that the Paris is the place to send the garment. Quality and fair prices, sustained over a long period instantly bring to the customer's mind the Paris type of service and insure a guaranteed job.

ALTHOUSE TELLS OF NEW '42 DODGE

Economy Innovations Are Incorporated In New Models

Dodge enters its twenty-eighth new-model season with a line of cars of eye-filling beauty, incorporating an impressive list of operating advantages and economy innovations.

Broadly stated, the new Dodge line's major characteristics are: A new, undeniably more beautiful, exterior—completely restyled interiors—a new 105 h. p. engine transmitting its greater power through the Dodge All-Fluid Drive in a manner combining even faster acceleration with new fuel economy—new features promoting riding comfort and safety—and the provision, as standard equipment, of a variety of construction and operating details which in former seasons were regarded as extras.

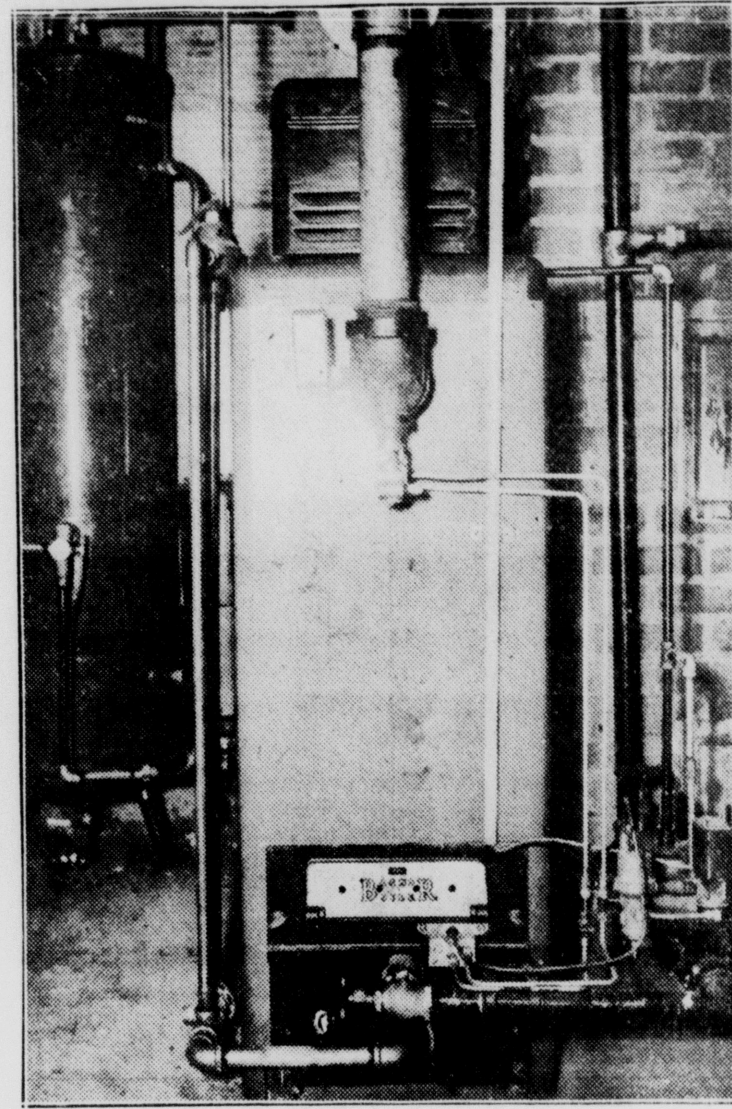

Offer 11 Vehicles

The entire line offers 11 vehicles; four of these are grouped in a De Luxe series, and seven in a custom series. The deluxe series includes: 3-passenger coupe, 6-passenger club coupe, 2-door sedan, 4-door sedan.

The group of custom models provides: 6-passenger club coupe, convertible coupe, brougham, 4-door sedan, town sedan, 7-passenger sedan, 7-passenger limousine. Wheelbases are 119½ inches for the regular de luxe and custom models, 137½ inches for the two 7-passenger models.

One point made by the Dodge people in connection with their new engine is that, although it develops 105 h. p. as against the former 91 h. p., the greater output is achieved with notable gasoline economy.

New Efficiency In Heating Plants

The field for the Basmor boiler, handled and installed by J. R. Stratton, Salem plumbing contractor, is that gas is economical and, further, people are learning that actual fuel cost is only a part of the total heating cost.

The carefree convenience of a Basmor gas-fired heating plant makes a real contribution to human health and comfort with its steady, even, healthful automatic gas heat.

A Basmor boiler installation emancipates one from the indignity and bondage of constant attention.

The Basmor boiler, series 25, has been designed for gas-fired heating plants in moderate sized installations. It is built in sizes ranging from two to 11 sections and is shipped with all sections assembled.

No job is too small or too large for the Basmor to handle.

Operation is safe and trouble free because of the splendid efficiency and simplicity of perfected Basmor gas actuated safety controls, designed to protect against every emergency, even against the failure of the controls themselves. If one should fail in its appointed function, the burner flame will be extinguished and the gas supply to the boiler shut off.

If you are interested in a boiler installation, consult first with Mr. Stratton and get first hand facts on the Basmor.

ADVISES PROPER SERVICING OF CAR

E. L. Grate Motor Company Emphasizes Saving to Motorist

"We modern automobile owners have learned to drive our cars far better than we have learned to care for them. The cars are built so well—they will withstand so much abuse and neglect—that we sometimes forget that the routine of seasonal inspection and good service are both important and economical," said E. L. Grate of the Grate Motor Co., local Ford dealer.

"To any car owner who is interested right now in the best possible service investment in his car, we suggest these sensible and timely suggestions, namely: That your car comes in for service soon enough and regularly.

"Proper care and adjustments at the right time—instead of repairs made too late through needless neglect—will save your car's functioning ability and will save you money. Too, you will be provided with better and safer transportation over a longer period of time," added Grate.

"There is additional logic in the recent Ford campaign of 'Bring Your Ford Back Home,' for naturally it is the Ford people who know the most about the integral working parts of a Ford product. Our parts and tools are made explicitly for Ford work and repair jobs.

"This naturally cuts down on wasted motion and saves on the time, the resultant feature being a saving to you," said Grate. It is the custom of the Ford Co. to send out monthly information on modern servicing ways.

"There is a tendency for all drivers to continuously go along driving their car because there is no apparent disturbance. However, a protective inspection at regular intervals might reveal some small or forthcoming trouble that could be taken care of before it became much more costly to the operator," he added.

Four times as much crude oil is processed and nine times as much motor fuel is made now in the United States as in 1917, the year the country entered the World War.

FRESH FOODS NEED PURE MOVING AIR

If Refrigeration Is Faulty, Let Citizens Ice Co. Inspect It

How can we protect fresh foods? Cold alone is not enough. Pure moving air, neither wet nor dry, is more important than cold air alone! So states William Tolerton, manager of the Citizens Ice & Coal Co.

"Temperature is quite important if we are to ideally protect our perishable foods," he says. "Growth of bacteria, which eat and multiply within all foods, is inhibited at temperatures below fifty degrees F. That is why we refrigerate perishable foods.

"Low and constant temperature is needed, but it should not be low. In the home or store refrigerator the temperature must be kept above the freezing point. It should never go above fifty degrees.

"Whatever the temperature is, it should not have rapid up-and-downs, such as are caused when mechanical devices turn the cold on and off.

"Ice refrigerators only as excess heat is present. Even a small fraction of one degree in temperature increases or decreases the rate at which it works. It has no on-and-off periods. It works incessantly.

Air Must Move

"Circulating air is required to evenly distribute temperature in any refrigerator. Air is the medium that carries excess heat in (or given off by) the foods to the ice (or other cooling agent).

"Unless the air in the refrigerator moves freely and in definite obedience to definite physical laws, it cannot take the excess heat to the cooling agent rapidly enough. The only cooling agent, in any refrigerator, that can purify the air as well as cool it is melting crystalline ice.

"Help is given the movement of air in the modern ice refrigerator. The cabinet is designed to direct the "drop" of the cold heavy air from the ice to the foods, and to also aid the "rise" of the air back to the ice when it picks up more heat in the food compartment.

"It is this law of nature, assisted by the arrangement of baffles and air flues, that makes the air in the modern ice refrigerator travel unceasingly from the foods to the ice. No mechanism is needed.

Air Carries Heat

"When circulating air travels from the foods to the ice as it must do in a modern air-conditioned refrigerator, it picks up the excess heat of course, but it also picks up gases, odors, bacteria and minute solids, just as it does when the air in the room moves from place to place. These impurities are harmful to our foods often more than is excess heat.

You can't know what Modern ice Refrigeration really is unless you have a good refrigerator in good condition. If you are not certain that your refrigerator is just about as good as it might be, ask the Citizens Ice & Coal Co. to have it inspected.

He received his Master of Arts degree from Ohio State in 1931.

Active in community affairs, he taught adult classes in Y. M. C. A., evening schools at Wooster and Massillon, was assistant superintendent of Sunday school, and a regular teacher as well as clerk of the session of the First Presbyterian church of East Palestine. Dodgers Pick Winner Wyatt In Hopes Of Prolonging Series

Veteran Righthander Will Hurl Again After Pitching Brooklyn Win In Second Game

BY GAYLE TALBOT
BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 6—Yesterday these two things happened in Brooklyn:

A baseball writer, before hurrying away to witness the fourth World Series game between his own Dodgers and the hated Yankees had to rush his wife to the hospital. There six stitches were taken in her arm—she had been spiked while playing football with the neighborhood children.

At approximately 4:30 P. M. with the Dodgers leading the Yankees by a score of 4-3 before 33,000 supremely happy Ebbets Field fans, with two Yankees out in the ninth inning and with two strikes on Tommy Henrich, feared Yankee slugger, Pitcher Hugh Casey of the Dodgers curved a curve that Henrich missed by close to a foot.

And here is the almost unbelievable parallel between the two strangely assorted instances. Catcher Mickey Owen of the Dodgers failed to catch the ball. Not only did he fail to catch it, but Owen, one of the finest receivers in baseball, permitted the ball to bounce off his mitt and roll clear to the stands. Why, even Ernie Lombardi of the Cincinnati Reds would have caught that ball.

What happened after that should not have happened even to a Dodger. President Larry MacPhail of the Flatbushers, leaving the darkened park an hour later with the dark tears rolling down his cheeks, said, in fact: "I've been sitting in there saying to myself that this simply could not have happened. Maybe I dreamed it."

Skyrockets Burst
Let us not dwell upon the horrid details. As almost everyone knows by this time, the Yankee burst loose like skyrockets after that unhappy miff by Owen. Big Brawny persons bearing names like Joe DiMaggio, Charles Keller and Joe Gordon slugged Hugh Casey silly bouncing balls repeatedly off the right and left field fences. And when the night-mare ended the Yankees were leading 7 to 4, held an impregnable-looking lead of 3 victories to 1 in the Series, and the Dodgers and their supporters wanted to go off to some quiet spot and die.

There never was anything like it before in baseball and, pray Amer Dou'eday, there never will be again. It simply could not have happened, and yet it did.

The result was that the Dodgers, after having put up a plucky fight, went into the fifth engagement at Ebbets Field today hanging on the ropes and about ready to utter those immortal lines: "Hullo Mom, I done my best but I lost."

Have Long Odds
Only once in the last 33 years, since the World Series became a seven-gamer, has a club arisen from a 1-3 deficit to win out. The Pittsburgh Pirates of 1925 did it in beating the Washington Senators.

In a desperate effort to pull the thing out, Pilot Leo Durocher of the Dodgers called upon Whit Wyatt, his veteran righthander, who licked the Yankees in the second game at the stadium four days ago. That was short rest for a man of Wyatt's advanced years, great a pitcher as he undeniably is.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees made a random choice of Ernie Bonham, a right hander with a lame back, to polish off the befuddled flock.

The post-mortems were many last night. Some said that Casey with two strikes and no balls on Keller in the ninth—with Henrich and DiMaggio on the sacks—should not have come down the middle with the third one. That was the one Keller picked, sending in the tying and winning runs. He is notorious for swinging at bad balls.

Others found fault with Manager Leo Durocher because he did not go out and have a nice talk with Casey some time during that fateful inning or perhaps even bring in another pitcher from the bullpen. Owen apparently was the only one unwilling to scatter the blame. He said: "It was my fault. They were right in giving me an error. The ball didn't hit the dirt. It broke farther than I expected, and I missed it."

Casey, himself, said that he bore down especially on the pitch giving it everything he had, and that it "jumped" farther than any ball he threw in the game. It obviously was no optical illusion, it curved. It looked to these eyes that it would have been a ball if Henrich had not swung, giving him a walk, but others thought it caught the corner.

Columbiana Bows To Minerva Eleven

COLUMBIANA—The Minerva Scarlet Raiders led to their second straight Tri-County league victory here Saturday by pinning a 14-0 defeat on the Columbiana Clippers as Jim Mazzaferro tallied both touchdowns.

Minerva employed straight football to advance the ball to scoring territory in the first and fourth quarters with Mazzaferro plunging over the goal line. The Raiders attempted no passes. Dieringer booted both extra points.

DAYTON TACKLES TENNESSEE; LEADS OHIO GRID PARADE

Undefeated Flyers Have Scored 144 Points to Opponents' None

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Oct. 6—Seventeen of Ohio's 36 football-playing colleges are unbeaten for the infant season, but next weekend's schedule calls for several of them to bite the dust.

Of 23 games scheduled, a dozen against foreign foes, four will pit unbeaten squads against each other. Dayton's rampaging Flyers, winners of three in a row and with 144 points scored against none for the enemy, face the greatest menace as they invade Knoxville for a tilt with Tennessee's vaunted Volunteers. Xavier, which beat St. Vincent 21 to 7 at Latrobe, Pa., Sunday for its third in a row, meets John Carroll next Sunday and the Clevelanders have only a 0-0 tie with Baldwin-Wallace marring their record.

Kent State, Denison, Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio State, Heidelberg and Akron have won two each, while Case, Wittenberg, Kenyon and Wilberforce have won their lone start, but all the others have been beaten or tied with the campaign just getting under way.

Ohio State, after its rousing 33-0 win over Southern California, rests next Saturday to get ready for the Big Ten opening with Purdue the following week. Here's the slate for the others:

Games Listed
Friday—(All night games) Kent State at Case, Findlay at Muskingum, Western Reserve at Akron, Ohio Northern at Albion, Illinois Wesleyan at Youngstown, Lawrence Tech at Wittenberg, Defiance at Ashland.
Saturday: Capital at Heidelberg, Marietta at Mount Union, Wooster at Denison, Otterbein at Oberlin, Bowling Green at Miami, Kenyon at Rochester, Ohio Wesleyan at Baldwin-Wallace, Toledo at Marshall, Western Kentucky Teachers at Ohio C., Dayton at Tennessee, Wayne at Cincinnati, De Sales at Grand Rapids, Bluefield at Rio Grande, Westminster at Hiram, and Wilberforce vs Tuskegee at Chicago.
Sunday: Xavier at John Carroll.

Lisbon Beaten By Boardman, 26 to 0

LISBON, Oct. 6.—The Lisbon High Blue Devils suffered their second setback in the Tri-County league when they were overwhelmed 26 to 0 by Boardman High in the third and fourth periods at Boardman Saturday afternoon.

The locals were unable to withstand the terrific onslaught of the Boardman ground attack, with several replacements, made necessary by injuries, in the Lisbon ranks.

The victors got their first score in the third period when Sullivan, fleet halfback, skirted the end for 3 yards, Fullback Rick bucked it over for the extra point. Sullivan gave a report performance from the 10-yard line later in the same period, but an attempt to annex the extra point with a pass failed.

Rich and Getting scored one apiece in the final, with the latter scoring in the last 30 seconds of play as he knifed his way through tackle for some 20 yards. Pastor converted the extra point on a pass to bring the total to 26.

Boardman rolled up 16 first downs to Lisbon's 2.

U. S. Chutists Practice Attack on the Panzers

An army parachute squadron from Fort Benning, Ga., descends to earth during demonstration they put on as part of tactical showing of new army equipment and training staged at Fort Belvoir, Md. These chutists seem to be attacking an "enemy" tank, the backbone of the panzers. Members of Congress and noted diplomats saw the demonstration.

Latin America Looks To U. S. For Armament; Defense Begins

By LAWRENCE S. HAAS

Latin America

Definite steps toward modernization of the armed forces of many American republics at last seem to be under way.

Although many of the countries, especially the larger ones of South America, have sizeable well-trained forces of military reserves, through their traditional policies of compulsory military service their equipment and material have not kept pace with the development and practices of modern warfare. Military conditions in those countries, in this sense, are analogous to that existing in the United States before the present armament program began.

Learning of the countries of Latin America has been highlighted during the past several weeks by these developments:

1—Gen. Eduardo T. Lopez and Rear Admiral Saba H. Suero, of Argentina, soon will leave for the United States to open negotiations for military and naval equipment and material. More than $100,000,000 has been appropriated for military and naval armament by the Argentine congress.

2—Uruguay has been granted a loan of $17,000,000 under the Lend-Lease act to buy military equipment in the United States.

3—Mexico has ordered 160 military planes from the United States, and has indicated that other equipment also will be sought.

4—A credit has been arranged in Washington by the government of Haiti for armament purchase.

U. S. Sends Missions
Military, naval and aviation missions from the United States are stationed in Argentina, Brazil, Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Paraguay, Peru, Ecuador, Haiti, Guatemala, El Salvador, Venezuela and Nicaragua.

In addition, virtually all Latin American republics have taken advantage of invitations from the War department, and have sent junior officers to serve with active units in various arms and at service schools.

There is still a wide discrepancy between placing of orders for military, aviation and naval equipment and their delivery. Until the United States defense industry has reached a high production peak and with the urgent and growing demands placed upon it by countries fighting the Axis, there seems little prospect that an appreciable flow of armament will begin to move southward.

Priorities To Be Granted
Nevertheless an effort to supply these countries with the equipment they most urgently need seems to be evident. The newly-created Supply Priorities and Allocations board is planning to grant priorities to Latin America.

The decision of Latin American governments to strengthen their armed forces has been a slow process. It has been tied in closely with complicated political and economic factors.

The spending of large sums for arms is a painful step for most of the countries, which have suffered infinitely more than the United States as a result of the loss of markets due to the war and their national economies have been severely crippled by the world conflict.

Nazi infiltration and plotting in many of the Latin American countries has forced the governments to consider strengthening their defenses. The revelations of the Taboria congressional committee—the Argentine counterpart of the Dies committee—must have had an important effect on the government's resolve to spend a vast sum at least vast for a country of 13,000,000 inhabitants, on arms developments in Chile, with the arrests of more than a score of Germans as alleged subversive plotters, have focused public attention on the potentiality of totalitarian dangers.

U. S. Policy Scrutinized

The policy of the United States is being closely watched in Latin America. Both the press and government circles appear to react in approval of whatever firm steps are announced by the United States, and an atmosphere of hesitation has shown itself in many of the southern capitals at times when there seemed to be indecision in Washington.

Thus far there apparently has been no progress in any arrangement for naval bases in Latin American territory for United States use to strengthen hemisphere defense. However, the expansion of flying fields in several South American regions by the Pan-American airways, including new hangar space, more runway area, modernized fuel storage facilities etc., together with the construction of additional fields, would lead to the belief that they may be made available for military purposes in case a contingency should arise, demanding their employment as essential points for the defense of the continent.

NAZIS PRESSING NEW SOVIET DRIVE

Russia Claims Notable Gains In Leningrad, Ukraine Areas

scored notable gains in the Leningrad and Ukraine sectors.

Despite admittedly huge losses, the Soviet soldiers were said to have pushed the Germans back two to three miles at some points before Leningrad and advanced as much as 21 miles on the southwestern sector, where the Crimean stand at the gates of the Crimea.

But the Russians said the virtual no-quarter fighting of the last 15 weeks had taken a colossal toll of the belligerents.

Alexander Shcherbakov, director of the Soviet information bureau, announced in detailed reply to Adolf Hitler's Friday claim of 25,000 Russian casualties that they actually had lost 1,123,000 men killed, wounded and missing since the start of the war June 22.

He ridiculed Hitler's figure as "fantastic and delirious data" and asserted the Germans have lost 3,000,000 casualties, almost as much in 15 weeks as the Kaiser lost two years of the World war.

He said the Russians had lost 7,000 tanks, against Hitler's claim of 19,000 tanks destroyed; 8,000 guns against Hitler's claim of 22,000; and 5,316 planes against Hitler's claim of 14,000.

Charging that Hitler was "mad of telling the truth" on German losses to the German people, Shcherbakov declared in addition to the 3,000,000 casualties the Nazis have lost 11,000 tanks, 13,000 guns and 9,500 planes.

The first patent for an electric headlight for locomotives was issued in 1881.
